Once upon a time, in the heart of a majestic forest, there lived a brave little acorn princess named Truly.

Truly was not like the other princesses. She didn't care for fancy dresses or royal balls. Instead, she loved climbing trees, exploring the forest, and making new friends.

One day, while Truly was exploring a distant part of the forest, she came across a group of mean squirrels who were bullying a smaller squirrel.

Truly's heart sank. She knew she had to do something to help, but she was scared. She was small and the squirrels were much bigger than her.

But Truly remembered her father's words: "You are braver than you think you are, Truly." So she took a deep breath and stepped forward.

"Stop!" she shouted. "Leave that squirrel alone!"

The mean squirrels laughed. "What's a little acorn princess going to do about it?" one of them sneered.

Truly didn't know what she was going to do, but she knew she couldn't just stand there and do nothing.

So she started to sing.

Truly's voice was sweet and clear, and it filled the forest with its melody. The mean squirrels stopped laughing and listened.

Truly sang about courage and kindness, and about standing up for what is right. The squirrels were mesmerized by her song.

When Truly finished singing, the squirrels looked at each other in amazement.

"That was beautiful," one of them said.

"You're right," said another. "We were wrong to bully that squirrel."

The mean squirrels apologized to the smaller squirrel and promised to never bully him again.

Truly was so happy that she had been able to help. She had learned that she was braver than she thought she was, and that she could use her voice to make a difference.

From that day on, Truly became known as the Brave Acorn Princess. She continued to explore the forest, make new friends, and stand up for what is right.

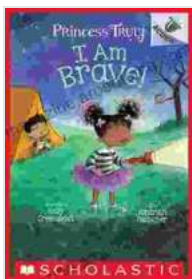

And she always remembered her father's words: "You are braver than you think you are, Truly."
