In her powerful and moving memoir, One Nurse's Experience Inside the Sierra Leone Epidemic, volunteer nurse Sarah Collins shares her firsthand account of the crisis. She takes us into the heart of the epidemic, where she witnessed both the darkest depths of human suffering and the extraordinary resilience of the human spirit.

A Call to Action

Sarah's story begins with a call to action. In 2014, as the Ebola epidemic raged, she felt an overwhelming sense of duty to help. Despite the risks, she left her comfortable life in the United States and travelled to Sierra Leone, one of the countries hardest hit by the virus.

Sarah's mission was to provide medical care and support to the people of Sierra Leone. She worked in a makeshift Ebola treatment center, where she witnessed firsthand the horrors of the disease. She saw patients suffering unimaginable pain, and she held the hands of countless dying individuals.

Love, Loss, and Resilience

Despite the overwhelming challenges, Sarah's memoir is not only a story of despair, but also a story of love, loss, and resilience. She writes about the incredible strength and compassion of the Sierra Leonean people, who faced unimaginable adversity with courage and dignity.

Sarah also shares her experiences with the other international aid workers who came to Sierra Leone to help. Together, they formed an unbreakable bond as they worked side-by-side in the fight against Ebola.

A Transformative Experience

Sarah's time in Sierra Leone was a transformative experience. She learned the true meaning of sacrifice and the importance of human connection. She also gained a deep respect for the resilience of the human spirit.

Sarah's memoir is a must-read for anyone interested in global health, public health, or the human experience. It is a powerful and moving story that will stay with you long after you finish reading.

Sarah Collins is a nurse and healthcare advocate. She has worked in various global health initiatives, including the Ebola epidemic in Sierra Leone. She is currently the founder of a non-profit organization that provides healthcare support to underserved communities.
