A QUICK GUIDE TO BASIC INFOGRAPHIC STRUCTURE

Are you about to make your first infographic? Or are you curious if you've been doing infographics right?

It pays to understand what a good, well-thought-out infographic structure should look like. Like a good story, it should have a beginning, middle, and end. Print this out or save this file in your computer as a quick reminder the next time you're about to start creating your own infographic.

HEADLINE OR TITLE
Your heading or title should talk about the entire gist of your infographic. Keep it short yet catchy at the same time. What is it about?

BEGINNING OR INTRODUCTION
A couple of sentences describing your infographic. Like a good post, your introduction should hook your reader. What do you think and your reader's pain points or struggles?

MIDDLE OR MAIN INFOGRAPHIC CONTENT
This is the meat of your infographic. Identify multiple elements of your main topic. A good example would be talking about a pros-and-cons, or explaining the steps in a process. Break down that subject into smaller sections by using subheadings, supporting sentences and data visual elements such as charts, tables, and icons.

END OR CONCLUSION
This is where you summarize and reinforce your content. Do not forget to write your Call to Action when applicable. What do you want your reader to do after watching the infographic?

SOURCES AND FOOTNOTES
Don't forget to list your sources if you're using sources, advert from your own team, research using fresh research data.
